11 FEBRUARY 2012

A DAY TO DEFEND

FREE EXPRESSION

14:00 -16:00 HOURS AT: OLD PALACE YARD
(OPPOSITE HOUSE OF LORDS)

One Law for All is calling for a rally in defence of free expression and the right to criticise religion on 11 February 2012 in central London with simultaneous events and acts in defence of free expression in countries world-wide.

The call follows an increased number of attacks on free expression in the UK, including a 17 year old being forced to remove a Jesus and Mo cartoon or face expulsion from his Sixth Form College and demands by the University College London Union that the Atheist society remove a Jesus and Mo cartoon from its Facebook page. It also follows threats of violence, police being called, and the cancellation of a meeting at Queen Mary College where One Law for All was to deliver a speech on Sharia.

Whilst none of this is new, recent events reveal an increased confidence of Islamists to censor free expression publicly, particularly given the support received from universities and other bodies in the name of false tolerance, cultural sensitivity and respect.

The right to criticise religion, however, is a fundamental right that is crucial to many, including Muslims.

Clearly, the time has come to take a firm and uncompromising stand for free expression and against all forms of threats and censorship.

11 February is our chance to take that stand.

You need to be there. Enough is enough.
